THE question as to who should succeed Sir Robert Hart as Inspector-General the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs has, ever since the appointment of that gentleman to the post of British Minister to Peking, been a subject of much doubt and conjecture. It is now more. than two months since the first report that Sir ROBERT HART was to succeed Sir HABRY PARKES was published, and to this day no official confirmation of the appointment has been made. There is no doubt that Sir Robert has accepted the post so honourably filled by i. late lamented Minister, but for some reason-doubtless the difficulty the Chinese appear to find in naming a new head of the Customs -the notification of his appointment has not been gazetted nor has be assumed charge of the Legation. Rumour of course has been very busy in designating the new Inspector-General, and the names of Mr. JAMES H. HART, brother of Sir ROBERT HART, Mr J. McLeavy Brown, and Mr. G. Du TRING have all been mentioned freely as likely to receive the honour. It has also been suggested that no Inspector-General would, for the present, be appointed, but that the Customs Service would be directed by a triumvirate, selected from the principal Commissioners. Now, however, comes a report from Peking which upsets all previous speculation and is likely to confound the be allowed to go any farther. Daily News this clause read as follows :-

where he is promoting the high cause o to that which he left his country to promote.

The object of France and China in entering into this Treaty being to secure friendly commercial rela-tions between neighbouring States, it is now desired to duly realise this object by France opening up reade in Tonquin and promoting the early construction of railways: and it is agreed that if in the future China desires to lay down railroads, the advice of French experts shall be available for this purpose. And in the matter of scouring the necessary labour, France will help to the utmost, while it is clearly understood between the two parties that this clause is not to construed as contining that advantage to France alone.

The French text is as follows :-En vue de développer dans les conditions les ple ayantageuses les relations de commerce et de be voisinage, que le présent traité a pour objet de rétablir entre la France et la Chine, le Gouvernement de la République construirs des routes au Tonkin et y en . couragera la construction de chemins de fer. Lorsque de son côté, la Chine aura décidé de struire des voies ferrées, il est entendu qu'elle s'adressera à l'industrie française, et le gouvernement de la République lui donnera toutes les facilités pour se procurer on France le personnel dont elle aura besoin. In the force, having latterly been employed at absurd charge of perjury against the witnesses l est entondu anesi que cotte clause ne peut être considérés comme constituant un privilège exclusif en avour de la France. The important point of difference is that whereas the Chinese text says that if China desires to lay down railroads "the advice or French experts shall be available for this purpose," the French text says that China " shall address herself to French industry, and the Government of the Republic wi give her all facilities for procuring in France whatever personnel she may require.". Both versions agree in the provision that thi clause is not to be considered as constituting an exclusive privilege in favour of France. The proper construction to be placed upon this clause may be looked upon almost as

TINGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Company's Steamship.

Chinese and English type correspond in the size The Treaties between Great Britain and of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To the illustrate the vast scope of the work following facts are submitted for consideration:-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which NORTHERN & Messra. Hall & Holfs and Kelly have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as

> For practical purposes the arrangement of THE Steamship the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who Captain Webster, will be despatched as above understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Enropeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

POST-OFFICE NOTICES.

Attention is invited to the following particulars on the subject of Local Delivery:-LOCAL DELIVERY. - No delivery is attempted on board Ship, at the Peak, Kowloon, Aberdeen, &c., nor at any private house (even though named in the address) when there is a place of business nearer, at which delivery can be effected

(Postal Guide, par. 159). The above Regulation is not new, but has been the invariable rule of the Post Office for many years. Considerable efforts have been made to secure its being generally understood. To prevent, however, if possible, any further disappointment in the matter, it will appear permanently on the Mail Lists issued twice every

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addresses need do is to note on the cover, Sent to ----, or Received at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it, without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives

The Plantagenets also raised money on the "benevolence." principle—literally appeals to the charity of their subjects. Edward the Fourth, being very handsome, was remarkably successful at this method of extortion, particularly with the fair sex. It is related that one rich widow, captivated by his good looks, thbled twenty pounds with a good grace. The King was so pleased that he kissed her, and the lady immediately doubled her benevolence, "bocause she esteemed the kiss of a King so precious a jewel." Queen Elizabeth also raised a great deal of money by appeals to the "benevolence" of her subjects. It is related that on one occasion the Mayor of Coventry brought her a handsome well-filled purse. when the Queen remarked: "I have few such gifts, Mr. Mayor: it is a hundred pounds in gold." "Please your grace," said the mayor, "it is a great deal more we give you." "What is that?" said the Queen. "It is the hearts of your loving subjects." replied the mayor. To which the Queen rejoined: "We thank you, Mr. Mayor, That is a great deal more indeed." James the First instituted another mode of raising the wind, which, although hardly under the
